Economics Expertise in Competition, Healthcare, Life Sciences, and Complex Commercial Disputes

Our team of expert economists provides testimony and privileged consulting across antitrust and competition matters, healthcare and life sciences disputes, and other complex commercial disputes. We analyze class certification issues, liability, market dynamics, and damages in litigation and arbitration before U.S. courts and arbitration panels and international dispute forums.

Our Services

Our experts deliver written and oral testimony and privileged economic consulting in antitrust and complex commercial disputes before federal, state, and international courts, as well as regulatory and administrative authorities. We assemble right-sized teams with the ability to scale, supporting multiple experts, including economists and industry specialists, with advanced modeling and data analytics tailored to each matter's specific requirements.

Our Experience

We offer unparalleled depth in providing rigorous economic analyses and expert evidence in matters, involving allegations of price-fixing, market allocation, wage-suppression, non-competes, merger-related competitive effects, monopolization, abuse of market power, intellectual property and contractual disputes, and the quantification of economic harm, including overcharges, lost profits and unjust enrichment. Our experts regularly testify before national courts, transnational arbitral institutions, competition inquiries, government panels, and regulatory tribunals worldwide.

Our experience spans all phases of investigations and disputes, including preliminary economic assessments of potential claims; regulatory review of challenged business practices or transactions and their competitive effects; work relating to consent decrees and conditional settlements across diverse contexts; and the preparation of expert reports, deposition and trial testimony, and expert preparation for deposition and trial.

We understand the interaction between economic evidence and the legal process. No two matters are alike, and our evidence is tailored to the relevant facts, the economic environment, and the intended audience. In every engagement, we deliver compelling evidence that addresses the core issues while demonstrating why our analysis fits the specific facts and context at hand.
